

Jim is extremely lucky to be alive. He appears to be mildly hypothermic with some pulmonary edema in his lungs (as evidenced by his mild respiratory distress). Although currently awake, he may go into respiratory arrest and die if the fluid in his lungs continues to accumulate: Begin an immediate Level 1 evacuation to the nearest trauma center. Do not let him go home by himself.